Well, this is rather in the personal good department, but my boy decided learn to crawl the same day his first tooth broke through his gums -- and all of his grandparents were down to visit and see him.

The drought in the southeast has faded to a very small area of western South Carolina, and another small patch in northeastern North Carolina.

There is a big slice of leftover chocolate cake in the kitchen waiting for me. You want half?

Man, you want chipper first thing Monday morning? That's a tall order.

Well, let's see.

The government is still printing enough money to cover our paychecks.

You can use your paycheck to buy the reissue of the original Stay Trek bridge toy.

Doesn't have to be chipper. Could just be coffee. Coffee is good, after all.

I have a rosebush about to bloom. It's a beautiful cool sunny spring day. I have gorgeous fresh eggs in my fridge, and it's strawberry season, and if you come visit I'll make you a strawberry ~~clapotis~~ clafoutis with all local ingredients.

edit for studip

My sister got us a lot, a basement and a set of stairs a for new year's gift... and we moved in last month, after she created/repaired the walls and fixed the floors.

Six men carried me out, Cleopatra-style, using a handy recliner as my stretcher and a truck as a barge. Saved us the $100 ambulance fee and... well, I got to be Cleopatra.

It a was glorious way to come home.
